Jerzy Moszkowicz

Director of the Ale Kino! Festival

At the end of February, on my way back from the Berlinale, which – as every year – marks the beginning of the intensive work leading up to the next edition of Ale Kino!, I was carrying with me the memories of many fruitful meetings with producers, distributors and film friends from all corners of the world. So many films watched, so many conversations about them, too. But I also carried a strong sense of anxiety. It was during the Berlinale that we learned about the mass infections spreading in the north of Italy – infections with a new virus that no one had ever heard of before. No more than a dozen days later, nothing in our life or work was the same anymore... Film festivals were cancelled, postponed or moved online, as were all other cultural activities.

Ale Kino! is essentially about films. The ones we so carefully select throughout the year, from the Berlin screenings onwards. The dream scenario is to watch them together, in the cinema. To meet their makers. To talk, argue, dispute – in the case of adult viewers, professionals, frequently deep into the night. This brings us all together in the enchanting world of cinema. But still, films are what it's all about. And people.

That is why, out of concern for the safety of people and with films in mind, we decided to move a major part of the Festival online, so that we can be sure that all of the wonderful productions can be watched. There are undoubtedly some good sides to this transfer. We are able to reach young audiences throughout the country, not only in Poznań. For the first time in the 57-year history of the Festival, we can be anywhere the Internet signal may take us. And according to Statistics Poland, more than 90% of households use the Internet today. This means that we can reach more than 4 million families with children under the age of 16. Ah, we would have been delighted with a modest one percent of that number, or even a little less! Those who choose to venture into the depths of the Internet – and for young people these are rather friendly and well-known waters – will be rewarded with an opportunity to watch 120 films from 35 countries. Bearing with this nautical metaphor, in order to fish in such a bountiful ocean of films, all you need to do is board our website and navigate your way according to the instructions for passengers – viewers. A week of travel will pass in no time, and the cruise will leave us with wonderful souvenirs – emotions and laughter, reflections, experiences and conversations with kids about the trip we took together to the world of young audience cinema.

Moving the Festival online turned out a great challenge for everyone involved. We faced an almost pioneering task – we had to learn and acquire new competencies, and we had to do it fast. It is you, our audience, who will judge whether we have succeeded.

Already at this point, I would like to thank my excellent team. Working extremely hard as always, and this year even harder, they did everything that could be done so that we – the Audience and Organisers, cinema and Festival enthusiasts – could find our place in its new online reality.

I would also like to thank the organisers of all the autumn film festivals who were kind enough to share their experiences, and congratulate them on their successful journey through the pandemic environment. I am grateful for the thoughtful support of so many institutions and individuals, and indebted to everyone who shares our vision of cinema for children and young adults, especially in the current reality. Without you, there would be no Festival.

May we stay healthy and may cinema be with us!

Platinum Goats

Jerzy Moszkowicz

Director of the Ale Kino! Festival

At this year's Golden Calf Gala (Dutch, Gouden Calf) – the equivalent of the French César or Polish Eagles – one of their latest films took home four awards, including the awards for the best screenplay and best director.

In Poland, this has raised a few eyebrows – such a distinction, for a film for children! Well, in the Netherlands they would probably think it is not only a great movie, but even more importantly, a great movie for children...

This high standard had been set since the very beginning, dating back to 1989. Presented three years later, 'The Penknife' not only won the Golden Calf Award for directing, but was also awarded several European festival prizes, whereas the series based on the original movie received the television Oscar, the Emmy Award. It also delighted us here in Poznań as a model image, representing an extremely child-friendly 'cinema for the small ones', rich with multilevel values. In the years that followed, Ale Kino! Festival participants had the chance to marvel at such of their productions as 'The Boy who Stopped Talking', 'The Flying Liftboy', 'Miss Minoes', 'Winky's Horse', 'Pluck and his Tow Truck', 'Where is Winky's Horse?', 'Ben X', 'Morisson Gets a Baby Sister', 'The Indian', 'Alfie, the Little Werewolf', 'Fidgety Bram', 'The Zig Zag Kid', 'The Amazing Wiplala', 'Mr. Frog' – and last but not least, this year's laureate of four Golden Calves and last year's winner of the Golden Goats – 'Romy's Salon'. One would say that this film, directed by Mischa Kamp with screenplay by Tamar Bos, is the capstone of their thirty-year career. But that is not the case, as they keep on filming and we can be sure that their future productions will bring even more delight, excitements and joy to young viewers.

For all these charming and clever films, made with passion and awareness of children's needs, with a professionalism that does not obscure the honesty and sincerity of film expression, we award Platinum Goats 2020 to the BosBros production company of Amsterdam, and we give particularly deep bows and send our greatest regards to the boss of this crew, Burny Bos, and the extremely creative producer and screenwriter, Tamara Bos.

Platinum Goats

Xiaojuan Zhou
Attraction Distribution
Montreal. 30 October 2020

Am pleased with your decision to give this year's Platinum Goats Award to BosBros, a production company that has produced more than twenty family movies over the past three decades. We at Attraction Distribution are fortunate enough to act as their exclusive sales agent for most of these wonderful movies.

It's a collaboration that started in the late 1990s with their first film 'Penknife' and lasts till today with their latest 'Romy's Salon'. Their films have shone at prestigious festivals such as Berlinale, Cinekid, Ale Kino, Zlin, Giffoni, etc. They are also among the widest sold European films across all genres. From Norway to Egypt, from the US to Argentina, from China to Mexico, from Iran to Malaysia, from India to Columbia, these films have travelled on screens, big or small, way beyond their national border. They are remarkably acclaimed both by critics and audiences. It's amazing to see little Winky speak so many languages in the localised versions. These films have made a name for their country as admirers come from afar to listen, observe and learn. Some other prolific Dutch producers, scriptwriters or directors have worked at or with BosBros. Over time BosBros has become an institution on its own right. A brand that represents outstanding quality in family entertainment.

I can't end my text without mentioning Burny Bos, the founder of BosBros. He happens to be a producer who has become my mentor and friend. Inspired by Astrid Lindgren and her Pippi Longstocking, this gentleman has dedicated a huge part of his life to quality movies about and for children. He wrote, produced or promoted his films at home and abroad. He's a father figure in the industry and a great story teller (so good that beware that he could blur the line between fiction and reality for himself and his listener).

Long life BosBros!

Ale Kino! Festival celebrates BosBros

Gert Hermans
ECFA Content & Communication

What do a Polish young audience film festival and a Dutch film producer have in common? Respect for the audience, celebrated through courage, fantasy, diversity, imagination and quality! A youth film festival without Dutch titles has become unthinkable, due to a tradition launched by BosBros.

You can hardly separate BosBros from its founder Burny Bos. The merging of persona and company is complete. Burny Bos's preference for cheerful anarchism and his fight against the "be-neat-and-act-normal syndrome" can already be found in the radio and TV-shows he made for children since 1975, like the legendary 'Theo & Thea'. The effect of two weird child-adults with glasses and buckteeth shouting 'shit' and 'turd' loudly and explaining conception through a milkshake with birdseed and scrambled eggs, was earth-shaking. Parents thought the programme was either scandalous or brilliant, but in every playground children's imitations were highly popular with their peers.

A few years after BosBros was founded in 1989, I started working in children's film industry. 'The Penknife' was the first film on my desk, and BosBros' vision on childhood forever marked my perception. Burny Bos: "In all the years that I have been working for young audiences, I don't think children have changed substantially. Their big questions about life are still the same. Or rather: the innocence of not having to ask those questions and being able to fill in the answers yourself. Good producers know how to touch this universal 'child-human'. A good children's film offers a child something to hang on to once the film is over. All that super hero crap is just a confirmation of what is absolutely not true."

In the Netherlands, several generations grew up on the stories of children's author Annie M.G. Schmidt, that later were adapted by BosBros, laying the foundation upon which the company's success was built. It motivated scriptwriters like Tamara Bos ('Fidgety Bram', 'Winky's Horse', 'Alfie the Little Werewolf', and more) and directors like Mischa Kamp ('Winky's Horse', 'Romy's Salon') and Vincent Bal ('Miss Minoes', 'The Zigzag Kid') to deliver their best work. Nowadays, BosBros still has one big challenge for the future: to enter the market with animation. If their impact will be similar as with feature films, then soon we will all be queuing at the cinema at Christmas to see the new Dutch animation.

In 2014, Burny Bos received the prestigious Golden Calf Dutch Cultural Award – who wants a golden calf when you can have a platinum goat?! On this occasion Burny Bos expressed his concern: “Television is a beautiful medium, unfortunately often used in a not so beautiful way. Look at commercial channels and you will see junk in all its forms passing by, pumped into the heads of our children, hundreds of hours a week. It is not sufficiently recognized what impact television has on children. Everyone is concerned about hygiene, healthcare and education, then why not about what children see and hear? I would like to see youth television fall under the Ministry of Public Health.”

In the world of BosBros, you will meet the most colourful characters in an ordinary Dutch polder village: a lonesome Chinese girl ('Winky's Horse'), a traumatized Kurdish refugee ('The Boy Who Stopped Talking'), a Peruvian boy with a father complex ('The Indian'). And even a teacher who turns into a frog ('Mr. Frog'). Everything is possible and it all really happens, all the time!

Ale Kino! Football Zone

Football Goats

Jerzy Moszkowicz
Director of the Ale Kino! Festival

The world of football is full of brilliant stars. If they shine with a real, honest glow – and not only on the pitch – they can be so much more than just super-athletes. They can act as guides for their young fans on their way to a good and decent life. For people around the world, football is a vital part of their everyday lives, as well as a festivity, which – to some extent – makes up for all the obstacles and challenges life faces us with. However, this isn't true for all of us: while anyone can try to become a professional football player, no one should be forced to do so. This is exactly what the award-winning film is about. In a funny, yet brilliant way, it tells a story of a meeting of a football icon and his young admirer – an encounter that will profoundly influence their lives. Football Goats go to the Chilean production 'My hero Alexis', directed by Alejandro Fernández Almendras, for the wise message, filled with good energy and perfectly supported by the plot, which shows that everyone should be free to do what they love in life, and that friendships, including the football-related ones, will certainly help to achieve this goal. Congratulations to the authors! Furthermore, we would like to congratulate Alexis Sánchez – an outstanding player whose talents we have so far only been able to admire on the pitch – for his successful debut on screen.

Cantona in stockings, Beckham speaking Russian – only in cinema

Radosław Nawrot

Translated by Dorota Rewieńska

Halfway through ‘My Hero Alexis’ – there he was, right before my eyes – Éric Cantona, the football legend. Not in the jersey and football socks of the French national team, Olympique Marseille or Manchester United, but wearing a neatly-cut black caftan with a ruff, heron feather stuck in his beret, sporting stockings, poulaines, as well as a neatly trimmed pointed beard and a stiff moustache. I saw him in a 16th-century French nobleman’s attire.

It is not a delirious vision or a spell of cognitive extravagance, nor a sprint of imagination in a sudden counter-attack of thoughts or a conceptual stride. It is cinema.

Pondering about where and when Éric Cantona played best in his life, I must really carefully balance football and cinema. Both frequently come close to artistry, the highest mastery. Both require the involvement not only of the body, but also of the soul. In both cases, the word ‘play’ appears not without reason.

Éric Cantona is probably the best-known actor among footballers and the best-known footballer among actors, but he is surely not the only one combining the two realms. Apart from his jersey and football socks, he did wear a nobleman’s caftan, stockings and poulaines. The first outfit is connected with his wonderful roles in Manchester United and the French national team, the second – with his probably best cinema performance in the costume film ‘Elizabeth’ about the rule of Queen Elizabeth I of England set in the 16th century. In the first case, Éric Cantona played the role of the key midfielder on the pitch, in the second – Paul de Foix, the key diplomat and prelate. He was applauded and recognised for both performances.

If you think about it, these roles are similar – involving creation, outworldly in nature, and strongly costumed. Each time, Éric Cantona, in a manner characteristic for himself, popped up his collar – be it a match football shirt or a ruff dating back 500 years.

Éric Cantona is an eminent actor. He played in about 30 films, not including advertising spots. He directed and produced some of them himself, and the peak point of his career on the big screen was probably making a film... about himself. 'Looking for Eric' is a story about a postman whose life is descending into crisis. He manages to fight it with the help of – no surprise here! – footballer and actor Éric Cantona. He plays himself on screen – who could play him better?

Although it is said that a good actor is able to play a character better than if the latter played themselves.

The above-mentioned 'Looking for Eric' reminds me a bit of 'My Hero Alexis' which will be presented in this year's football panel at the Ale Kino! Festival. This is an extraordinary young audience film festival organised in Poznań, and one of its peculiarities is the unwavering dedication to showing football films, with the understanding that there is no young audience cinema without football cinema. Among all those issues and topics which the young viewer is particularly interested in, football must not be overlooked.

It is quite common practice to make a film featuring a well-known football player. It always adds prestige to such a film. A famous footballer is like a Hollywood star: creates buzz, guarantees a sold-out hit and splendour. However, such a footballer taken straight from the pitch is usually not cast as 15th-century nobleman, an ordinary passer-by, a gangster from the suburbs, a soldier from the front, an alien from another planet or any other film character. A famous footballer usually plays himself. It is somewhat understandable – using the surname of the star we engage in the film is the very point of that engagement.

Paradoxically, in the Chilean film 'My Hero Alexis' the surname is hardly mentioned. Here, everyone addresses the protagonist by the name Alexis, like you would a friend from the neighbourhood. And that's who he is, in fact. It is a story about a football star who is a friend from the neighbourhood in a small Chilean town of Tocopilla in the north of the country – one of those many South American towns where the street and football are the whole world.

Since it is a Chilean film, every fan already knows that it is about Alexis Sánchez – a legend of modern football, one of the most eminent footballers and pop culture figures who has already played some great 'roles' in his career, in the Champions League representing FC Barcelona, the 2014 World Cup, where Chile defeated Spain – the world champions – and where the penalty shoot-out with Brazil took place, and especially in Copa América, which thanks to him Chile won twice, in 2015 and 2016.

Let us stop at this point for a brief side-note, just as the child protagonist of this film stops at Alexis Sánchez's house to look at the ball from the Copa América finals displayed there on a pedestal. I was struck by the fact that in 'My Hero Alexis' the Chileans chose that very tournament as their little 'on-screen mass', that is to say, a scene with paying tribute and being puffed up with pride following a successful outcome. It struck me but came as no surprise.

Chile is one of those South American countries that have played an important role in football on the continent and even worldwide since time immemorial. However, the thing with them is that this had not translated into any success for years. A long time ago, when the Chileans organised the World Cup, they once managed to rank third in the world, although the mere fact that the championships were held at all should probably be seen as a greater success in this case. Two years earlier, in 1960, Chile was hit by a massive earthquake, which is very common in the region. 'Massive' is an understatement – the shock had a force of 9.5 on the Richter scale and was therefore the greatest recorded in the history of mankind. Chile collapsed, so FIFA decided to move the World Cup elsewhere. It was then that the historic, dramatic speech by Carlos Dittborn, the head of the organising committee of the cup, took place. The Chilean asked... No, he did not ask, he begged that the tournament not be taken away from his country, because it was only through mobilisation in its organisation that Chile could rise from the rubble. "Because we have nothing, we will do everything" – said Dittborn with tears in his eyes.

And FIFA concurred. For this story was a bit like football itself and many biographies of football stars – Chile, brought to its knees by misfortune, had little chance of succeeding, yet managed to do so nevertheless. They won by striving to win. Isn't that exactly the essence of sport?

The Chileans' beloved football had not seen any success for years, and finally, in 2015, Copa América brought them triumph – the first in Chilean history, and all the more cherished that it was after winning the penalty shoot-out in the final with Argentina, where the last, decisive eleven was shot by Alexis Sánchez himself. And a year later, Chile repeated this success, again with Argentina in the final and again after the penalty shoot-outs.

As Carlos Dittborn put it: they had nothing but they did everything.

Now I think we understand that Alexis Sánchez is not only a very well-known footballer of FC Barcelona, Arsenal or Inter. In Chile, he is a walking, running and shooting symbol. A symbol showing that you can, that it's possible, that you can get off your knees whatever the circumstances or that every curse or powerlessness lasts only for a while, and the beauty of sports lies in the fact that after every failure it gives you another chance.

Given all that, it is probably easy to imagine a film made by the Chileans in which a fictional protagonist – let's say a boy from the village of Tocopilla – proves successful against all odds thanks to faith, tenacity, and consistency. And always with a guardian angel in the form of, for example, Alexis Sánchez, by his side, symbolising the 'you can do it' attitude. A football film made in Chile could look just like this, cliché. But it's far from it.

'My Hero Alexis' surprises precisely in that the great Chilean football hero does not just appear in it to impress the boy and lead him from the world of street dust and disbelief to the world of fulfilled dreams. One could even say the opposite is actually true.

Alexis Sánchez seems to me rather a demiurge of reflection at a time when probably all the children in Chile, or perhaps all the children of the world, want to be footballers like him. He gives them space to ponder: are you sure you want it, do you know what it involves, are you certain you are fit for it, or maybe someone else is? It is an attempt to address, through the film medium, the issues particularly difficult in life and football – the inevitability of choice and loss.

Alexis Sánchez also lost a lot. This may sound strange, given his big house, a great car and the world at his feet. Yet he lost a lot and this film captures that well. He lost his carelessness, his cap of invisibility, the ability to blend into the crowd, he lost his chance to be like others once and for all. “Do you think that I have always had it all? I used to have nothing to eat” – these are the words of a man who somehow belongs to both these worlds: the world of poverty and the world of prosperity.

So, when I started to be ironic about yet another performance of a famous footballer playing himself, not only in the stadium but also on screen, to show how wonderful, half-godly and popular he is, I did not expect to eat my words. Alexis Sánchez did indeed play himself, but painting an acutely truthful picture. Not an artificial, essentially fictional character, bearing only the same name and surname as him; not his image in pop culture, the public’s – or his own for that matter – perception of himself, but his true self. A person who, after returning to his home town, recalls who he was, who he is, what he gained and what he lost. Who knows – maybe he lost the chance to talk about himself in such a way and the opportunity to do this arose with this film kept in a rather light, sometimes humorous convention?

As regards the child protagonist, his family and father, the film becomes somehow therapeutic, which brings it closer to another work that we will see this year in the football section of the Ale Kino! International Young Audience Film Festival. It is an Irish film ‘The Drummer and the Keeper’ where football also serves to combine two seemingly separate worlds. It is a story of a relationship between two people – a rock drummer and a man with Asperger syndrome. Medicine specialists describe this disorder as ‘persistent difficulties in social interaction, difficulties in accepting change, limited flexibility of thinking in the absence of mental retardation’ As it turns out – football helps!

This film is also worth seeing because it shows football as a language. A common language that can be used by people from different worlds, even hermetically sealed ones.

‘My Hero Alexis’, in turn, is a story which makes it possible to firmly emphasize that football and cinema play the same match. Let’s take a look at it this way – after all, even the circumstances accompanying the making of this Chilean film were a vivid reference to a recruitment process in many renowned clubs: hundreds of children who showed up for casting, dreaming of Alexis Sánchez. But the idea was not to stare and idealise him, but to play a match with him... and that being: the film.

It is a story similar to that from: ‘Pelé. Birth of a Legend’, a film from 2016, directed by Jeff Zimbalist and Michael Zimbalist – the ones who became famous with the memorable documentary ‘The Two Escobars’ about Pablo Escobar, the infamous drug baron, and the Colombian football player Andrés Escobar, murdered after scoring an own goal in the 1994 World Cup.

‘Pelé. Birth of a Legend’ is the story of the greatest footballer of all time, but the film focuses on a very specific period of time – when Pelé was young, ending with the first world cup in 1958. That required a smart casting decision as regards young actors. It had to be someone who would play Pelé and play like Pelé. The role was given to Kevin de Paula, the true embodiment of innocence in this film. Interestingly, the real Pelé, Edson Arantes do Nascimento, also had his moment. An episode, but how charming!

We can see the Brazilian national team during their visit in Sweden in the 1958 World Cup when they start to play with the ball. Not on the pitch, however, but in the hotel. The players pass the ball to one another, running on tables, benches, sofas and further on in the corridors. It is a wonderful scene, full of temperament and pure joy, as it was joy that carried the Brazilians to winning world champions title. The joy like in their childhood when they would run around the streets and favelas kicking a rag ball, forgetting the world around them. There is only one collision during this rush – the ball hits a cup of an elderly man sitting in a café, whom the young Brazilians then apologise to. However, he only smiles leniently, looking at them as if they mirrored a memory of his own. That is Pelé himself in his shortest and perhaps most charming film role.

After all, the great Pelé has played in many films, such as the memorable ‘Escape to Victory’ about a war match between a team of prisoners of war from all over the world and that of the Third Reich. The match which was organised at the Colombes Stadium in Paris (the arena of the last pre-war World Cup in 1938) as an opportunity to flee but whose participants verify the plans, seeing how important it is for the gathered people that they triumph over the occupier.

The film featured so many football stars that Sylvester Stallone – despite being Rocky – looked like a junior team player alongside them. There was Pelé, Osvaldo Ardiles, the Argentinean champion, the English ace Bobby Moore (‘the highest instance’, as commentator Jan Ciszewski called him just before Poland scored a goal in Chorzów), John Wark, the Scottish conqueror of Lech Poznań (he scored four goals as Liverpool FC player), the Belgian Paul Van Himst, and finally our silent virtuoso Kazimierz Deyna – the entire crème de la crème of the football of 1981 when the film was made.

However, Kazimierz Deyna was not the most popular representative of Poland in the film world. It is Marian Łącz who definitely outperforms him in this department to the extent that most people probably associate him more with the screen than with the football pitch. It is he who points his finger at the station’s exhibition in ‘Co mi zrobisz, jak mnie złapiesz’ [‘What will you do when you catch me’], and, also there, asks ‘zdanżasz pan’ [‘do you manage on time’, transl. note: famous line, linguistically incorrect in Polish for humorous effect], when the milk has the fastest transport; as a collector in ‘Miś’ [‘Teddy Bear’] informs that you don’t have to know anything about the job at all because you have a computer; joins the highway robbers in ‘Jano-sik’; and in the series ‘Dom’ [‘Home’] plays – interestingly – an employee of a football club. Only that fragment reminds us that Marian Łącz, before his acting career, used to wear a national team’s jersey as football player, and in 1949, as a player of ŁKS Łódź, he was the vice-top scorer of the top Polish professional league Ekstraklasa, right after Teodor Anioła, Lech Poznań’s bombardier.

And it is Marian Łącz who features on the list of excellent footballers and then excellent actors who combined the mastery of play in both contexts wonderfully. Artistry in one area often resulted from the other – take Vinnie Jones, a former player of Chelsea London and the amazing Wimbledon FC from the 1980s, who sensationally won the English Cup in 1988. Vinnie Jones was the naughtiest boy in this team, known for his brutal play and red card collection. What the referees wished to eradicate, the screenwriters began to appreciate. Vinnie Jones became an acclaimed actor following the end of his football career, and specialised in playing shady characters in particular. The Welshman made his mark as Bullet Tooth Tony in Guy Ritchie’s ‘Snatch’, the armoured Juggernaut from ‘X-men’ or the killer from ‘The Midnight Meat Train’ – all roles typical for the brutal king of the mid-field. A role that proved perfect for a forward player was the performance in ‘Naked Instinct 2’, where Stan Collymore, an outstanding forward of Liverpool FC, Aston Villa or Nottingham Forest appeared, even though his performance was like a substitution in the injury time. For 30 seconds, he was speed-driving with Sharon Stone in a great, expensive Spyker C8 Laviolette, until... you can see for yourself how his entry into the game ends.

Many of the footballers' cinema performances were not very serious. After all, Zinedine Zidane appeared in 'Asterix at the Olympic Games' as Numerodix skilfully toying over a ball – and the name itself is a fantastic wink given to his football career. Paul Breitner, a great German footballer from the 1970s, became famous for his symbol-of-the-era lush hair not only in the stadiums of the World or Euro Cup, but also in his role in 'Potato Fritz' – a western/comedy. David Beckham, on the other hand, dons knightly armour as Trigger in 'King Arthur: Legend of the Sword', but he also has a small cameo as a man operating a projector in the KGB headquarters in a funny spy film 'The Man from U.N.C.L.E.', where he speaks Russian. Only two words – 'Apologies, comrade' – but still.

Ale Kino! Industry / Education Pro online

Director of the Ale Kino! Festival

Ale Kino! Industry / Education Pro online

2-5 grudnia 2020

Platforma spotkania i rozmowy o kinie dla dzieci z udziałem środowisk filmowych i pedagogicznych.

Ministerstwo Kultury i Dziedzictwa Narodowego

Narodowa Szkoła Filmowa w Łodzi

Współfinansowanie

Ale Kino! Industry / Education Pro online is a fringe event of Ale Kino! Festival. A meeting and discussion platform devoted to children cinema, it brings together the film and education environments.

Until recently, in our country, cinema for children and young adults, was still treated as marginal. Currently, we are witnessing a clear breakthrough. Polish feature films are back on screens, enjoying instant, considerable, growing popularity with the audience. Interest in this type of films, also when it comes to animations, is clearly growing. This trend is stimulated by numerous programmes supporting the development of young-audience-orientated cinema. We intend for Ale Kino! Festival to be an important landmark on the map of such initiatives.

Our goal is to create a common space for debate on cinema for children, bringing together filmmakers and educators. It is in this 'commonality' that we see the greatest value of the project. Every year, the Festival is visited by outstanding educators who combine high-class pedagogical professionalism with a genuine passion for cinema. For their students, they are true guides through the world of cinematography, who see tremendous educational and learning opportunities in experiencing cinema together with young audiences. The opportunities go far beyond stereotypical entertainment or obligatory readings. Their knowledge and experience in working with the youngest ones form an excellent basis for discussing cinema for children. This dialogue will benefit all parties: filmmakers will get a clearer image of their future audience and a real understanding of their needs and interests; teachers will have the opportunity to better acquaint themselves with the process of film creation and distribution, as well as with the people involved.

This year's Ale Kino! Industry / Education Pro online will comprise two 'paths': 'Industry Pro' intended for the industry, and 'Education Pro' designed for the education sector. However, the programme is arranged in a way that gives participants a freedom of choice. They do not have to stick to the designated route but can navigate through the programme according to their interests. Some points on this map will essentially be common, fully embodying the idea of bringing together the film-making and educational environments.

Ale Kino! Industry Pro will focus on the issues of supporting the young audience cinema as well as extending its reach. We will introduce KIDS Regio, the European initiative for the development of cinema. We will recap the 'pandemic' autumn of film festivals of this kind. And since this year's Platinum Goats go to the Dutch producer BosBros, we will listen to a master class lecture by the Dutch virtuoso Ben Sombogaart, a director whose way of thinking about cinema for children is perfectly in tune with the vision of Burny Bos, the head of BosBros, as evidenced by the films they have made together.

Within the framework of Ale Kino! Education Pro we will discuss online film education opportunities in this challenging reality where most schools are required to educate remotely. Analysing the map of available initiatives and projects, we will consider dilemmas, look closely at problems, but also explore optimistic paths. As always, the programme for educators will provide for a space to present interesting activities carried out by the participants themselves. This year, we will introduce a preventive project on counteracting risky behaviours among children and adolescents through film therapy. Finally, we will invite participants to Saturday morning screenings. Every year, the core value educators derive from Ale Kino! Festival lies not only in learning, mutual inspiration and sharing experiences, but also, to a large extent, in meeting like-minded enthusiasts for discussions and an exchange of opinions about films. In these challenging times, we will try to recreate this vibe in the formula of an online meeting in small groups, during which participants will be able to meet with selectors of Ale Kino! and discuss the repertoire.

26. Great Film Adventure

Artistic and educational project

Marian Suchanecki
Project Coordinator

The Great Film Adventure, an artistic and educational project comprising a series of filmmaking workshops, has been organized by the Children's Art Centre since 1994. Twenty-six editions attracted a total of over 3000 participants from primary, junior high, and high schools in Poznań. So far, we have made 130 short feature films and documentaries.

The main task of the workshop participants is to make a short, several-minute-long feature or documentary etude based on their own idea. The classes are also supposed to serve as a practical form of expanding and supplementing basic school education in the field of film art. Through participating in the workshops, students are also preparing for independent, critical analysis and interpretation of various film and television productions. Practical exercises introduce the group of the most talented young people to the basics of the film-making craft, techniques, and methods, allowing them to continue to expand and deepen their film interests on their own.

The Great Film Adventure consists in:

- running a series of workshops (10 per year for each group), covering all stages of the filmmaking process – from the initial concept, through writing a script, casting, preparing the film set, and designing costumes, shooting, editing, working with sound, to the official cinema release. In the meantime, between workshop sessions, work is continued on a constant basis – participants and tutors exchange e-mails and communicate in special thematic groups created for this purpose on Facebook;
- combining the educational, artistic, social rehabilitation, and therapeutic functions, which involves a constant search for new practical solutions, as well as workshop methods and techniques. In many cases, the process itself is as important as the final outcome of the workshops, i.e. the resulting film;
- including groups of individual recipients from various backgrounds. It is the interaction with diverse individuals that should stimulate and inspire the participating groups to take independent actions and implement their own ideas;
- including people with intellectual and physical disabilities, the hearing or sight-impaired, children and adolescents with behaviour issues or from disadvantaged backgrounds in the filmmaking process, i.e. becoming involved in therapeutic, educational and rehabilitation processes in these environments;
- combining film education with the practical implementation of the knowledge during the filmmaking and post-production stages. While going through all the stages of creating a film, the participants acquire collaborative and teamwork skills, and learn to share responsibility for a joint undertaking;
- enabling the participants to work with a professional director, cinematographer, and editor.

Participants are selected on the basis of their ideas for the film. Throughout the stages of the filmmaking process, participants are assisted by directors, cinematographers, as well as tutors from the Children's Art Centre. Each group is assigned an artistic supervisor. Adults' involvement is essentially limited to assisting in the professional execution of the project and is adjusted according to the needs, skills, and predispositions of the participants.

So far, artistic supervisors have included, among others: Tomasz Dettloff, Beata Dzianowicz, Rafał Jerzak, Stanisław Jędryka, Jacek Filipiak, Mikołaj Haremski, Katarzyna Kasica, Krystyna Krupska-Wysocka, Stanisław Lenartowicz, Dorota Latour, Igor Mołodecki, Jerzy Moszkowicz, Krzysztof Nowak-Tyszowiecki, Mariusz Palej, Michał Rosa, Maciej Sterło-Orlicki, Wiktor Skrzynecki.

The project ends with a premiere cinema screening during the International Young Audience Film Festival Ale Kino! in Poznań. Later, the films are presented during special screenings and enter amateur competitions and film festivals in Poland and abroad.

Since 2015, the project has been implemented under the auspices and with the financial support of the Polish Filmmakers Association.

Selected films can be watched on the Children's Art Centre's website and on YouTube. The workshops have been listed in 'Film. Literacy. Initiatives.' (Poland–Germany 2015), a catalogue describing European educational projects in this area, published by the Polish Film Institute.

The person who was behind the initiative to invite children with disabilities to participate in the project, Polish director Krystyna Krupska-Wysocka, sadly passed away this year. In one of her interviews, she said: “Nobody had predicted how quickly picture-based civilisation would get to us. How significantly it would shape the souls and personalities of our children. The rapid development of technology in recent years has made access to films incredibly easy. The Internet has become another medium to facilitate this access, alongside cinema halls and TV screens. Sooner than not, we may be surrounded by fellow human beings, mostly minors, glued to the screens of their mobile phones, watching films in between texting their friends or fighting bloody battles. I should be pleased, but I ask myself: what kind of film would that be... In almost every group, we can immediately see participants who will stick to film for longer, some even for a lifetime. Now is the time to educate – not children but teachers. After all, it is up to them whether these workshops will result in filmmaking circles being established in schools.”

For the anniversary of the Great Film Adventure, Stanisław Jędryka – an outstanding Polish director and long-time collaborator of the pro ject – wrote the following words: “I feel that apart from the obvious cognitive value they offer, the film workshops organised as part of the Great Film Adventure are also a kind of school of life... In today’s difficult times for culture and art – and film for children in particular – initiatives of this kind give the art of film the chance to survive. Who knows? Maybe the young participants of these workshops – today passionate film enthusiasts and viewers, tomorrow potential filmmakers – are our hope for a better future.”

I truly hope they will, and I believe the words of late masters – Krystyna Krupska-Wysocka and Stanisław Jędryka – will indeed come true.

Films made within the frame of the 26. Great Film Adventure

In January 2020, the 26. edition of the project was launched. Young amateur filmmakers and cinema enthusiasts from high schools in Poznań set off on their first professional film adventure. Three groups of young artists worked under the supervision of professional Polish directors:

– ‘Da Vinci Filmmakers’ from Da Vinci High School in Poznań worked under the artistic supervision of director Tomasz Dettloff from Kraków and the educational guidance of Małgorzata Szadkowska, Magdalena Wójcik, Sylwia Pielim-Soltys;

– ‘Luboń – Great Film Adventure’ from the Poznań Cryptologists School Complex and the Bilingual High School in Luboń worked under the artistic supervision of director Rafał Jerzak from Poznań and the educational guidance of Piotr Świdziński, – ‘AMICI Film Group’ from the ‘AMICI’ Association for Assistance to Children and Families in Poznań worked under the artistic supervision of Beata Dzianowicz and Jarosław Stypa from Katowice and the educational guidance of Hanna Szeląg and Katarzyna Uljasz.

Meetings with the directors had to be discontinued due to the pandemic. It was therefore immediately decided that works on the scripts would be continued online. The participants kept on working on their scripts in previously-created Facebook groups as well as via Zoom or MS Teams. As a result, three scenarios were created in consultation with artistic supervisors. Unfortunately, subsequent pandemic restrictions once again stood in the way of executing these ideas on film sets. Regrettably, in September the organisers had to decide to postpone any shooting until next spring.

Young filmmakers about their experiences:

OLGA JÓŹWIAK – LUBOŃ FILM GROUP

“What I like the most about this project is that we can see how films are actually made. [...] The Great Film Adventure is a fantastic way to try something new, to develop creativity, simply – to have a great time... I would encourage everyone with at least a little interest in film to participate. You don't need any experience. It's a great opportunity to gain some.”

KINGA NUCKOWSKA – DA VINCI FILM GROUP

“Before the whole pandemic situation, which messed up our plans so much, I was teaching acting techniques, working in front of the camera... We had a great time. In our group, I am the organiser, communicator. We work well together as a group. We are creative, we have a lot of ideas, and I hope that the pandemic will not stop us from making this film at some point, that we will move forward and soon be able show you the effects of our work.”

MAJA WACHOWIAK – ‘AMICI’ FILM GROUP

“[...] What is our film about? The film is mainly about the pressure that young people put themselves under, about trying to find their life partner as soon as possible, about the constant pursuit of love [...]. Usually, this desperate search for love doesn't end well, and above all, it doesn't lead to honest relationships [...]. The film is also about toxic relations. Before the pandemic, we were all meeting together, brainstorming, creating the script and assigning roles. But then COVID came and we had to move our meetings online. We managed to finish the script. Now we are waiting to shoot. Making the film is a lot of fun and we hope that everyone will enjoy it... We would like to tell everyone – not only the young ones – that time will come for love [...] Let's just give ourselves some time, love will find everyone eventually.”

JAN RUMIŃSKI – LUBOŃ FILM GROUP

“This project is a really interesting idea which can help us, young people, work on our acting and filmmaking skills, as well as bring us closer as a group of people working together. What I like the most is that we create the script on our own and that it's up to us what the film will be about. I highly recommend taking part in this project.”

DANIEL BANACH – ‘AMICI’ FILM GROUP

“[...] Our film will be about toxic love. We have already had a few meetings, but unfortunately the virus stood in the way.”

KAROLINA GLASER – DA VINCI FILM GROUP

“My name is Karolina and I am from the Da Vinci Film Group. Toge ther with other participants, I co-create a film project [...]. So far, I have worked with the director who is our artistic supervisor. I co-authored the script. The works were very intense – the draft was created in about three days, and a month later we already had most of the script ready. I hope I will have the chance to play in this film [...].”

JULIA PIĄTEK – LUBOŃ FILM GROUP

“[...] this is the first time I’ve taken part in the Great Film Adventure. I think that this project can really develop a person and boost their creativity. I like the fact that we create the script ourselves from scratch, create the characters and then play these roles [...] I recommend taking part in this project to everyone, because it is an amazing adventure that may not happen again.”

KAJETAN SEMPOCH – DA VINCI FILM GROUP

“I take part in the Great Film Adventure. First of all, we wrote the script. It is such a valuable experience. We spent many hours creating the plot, building the characters and planning plot twists. I think the group is satisfied with the outcome. Thanks to the help of the director, we managed to turn it into a proper script. Unfortunately, the works had to stop because of the pandemic reality around. I can’t wait to return to the set and work on this film again. My dream would be to become an editor of the film. This is the part of film production I am the most interested in – so much that I would like to go to film school in the future.”

Screenings of films made as part of the Great Film Adventure became a tradition at Ale Kino! Festival. This year, the pandemic came in the way and the teams could not finish their projects. However, we would still like to invite you the Great Film Adventure screenings, this year – online. We will present four films made in previous editions:

– ‘Believe’ – film made by students of Junior Secondary School Complex no. 103 in Poznań under the artistic supervision of Mikołaj Haremski and the educational guidance of Paweł Chustak;

– ‘CSI Wilda’ – film made by the protégés of ‘Rezerwat’ Social Animation Group in Poznań, under the artistic supervision of Jacek Filipiak and the educational guidance of Aleksandra Nazar-Rzejak and Paweł Budajczak;

– ‘Pink Dress’ – film made by Jan Bytnar 10. Scout Team Assembly ZHP Poznań-Nowe Miasto Troops under the artistic supervision of Igor Mołodecki and the educational guidance of Aleksandra Kołcz and Agnieszka Kłyś;

– ‘A Not Only Midsummer Night’s Dream’ – film made by students of Junior Secondary School Complex no. 103 in Poznań under the artistic supervision of Jacek Filipiak and the educational guidance of Kinga Malik-Gunia and Ewa Woźniak.

The ‘People for People’ Community Foundation

The Foundation was established in 1989. It deals with widely understood oncological problems, focusing on the prevention and early detection of cancer, combined with the promotion of a healthy lifestyle. The Foundation works towards this end by mass screenings, training courses for healthcare professionals, education of young people and adults, and publishing work.

Another important area of focus is supporting people suffering from cancer and their families, and more specifically – offering practical, organisational and financial support to associations of oncology patients and their volunteers, providing physical and mental rehabilitation services after the treatment of malignant neoplasms, as well as offering education and counselling for cancer patients and their families (directly and through publications).

Finally, the Foundation provides material aid to oncology facilities by supplying them with the necessary diagnostic and treatment equipment. In order to reach the widest possible audience, the Foundation combines health promotion and cancer prevention efforts with outdoor events such as local festivals, mass races for children, and cultural events. Most of the Foundation’s initiatives take the form of monitored programmes rather than one-off events.

Ale Kino! on Tour

This year, the crisis caused by the pandemic could have thwarted the plans of the organisers and young audiences craving for meaningful films. Fortunately, this is not what happened. The 11. edition of the traveling Festival took off anyway. This time hitting... the virtual road!

We would like to thank all those who made this edition possible! We managed to gather such a wonderful and large audience in front of the screens during online sessions at schools – altogether, there were 447 classes and almost 10,000 young viewers from Białowieża and Hajnówka, Czarnków, Zbąszyń, Gołdap, Chełmko, Lipno, Rydułtowy and Cieplewo.

Have the two collections of animations about emotions and friendship, selected with the youngest viewers in mind, and three full-length films managed to win the hearts of young cinema enthusiasts? Have the film gems chosen by the programmers of the Ale Kino! International Young Audience Film Festival made our young audiences laugh, inspired emotions and reflection? A vast majority of viewers enjoyed the films and admitted that the screenings brightened up the strange pandemic reality we found ourselves in. This year, we weren't able to organise polls to find out the Jury's verdict, but we hope that next year will be different!

However, there is more to young cinema enthusiasts' life than just screenings! As part of the online Ale Kino! on Tour, we held 'Full-mobile film' workshops. This mysterious title describes tutorials in which film and theatre director Julia Szmyt and her sons explain how to make a film with a smartphone. We can't wait to see the outcome! Certainly, some brave participants will dare to face the challenge.

This year's 11. edition of Ale Kino! on Tour lasted only two days, but it went down in history. This time, we could not see the laughing faces of our viewers or experience Festival emotions together, but we know for sure that they all had a great time. Hopefully, next autumn we will be able to return with the traditional version of our touring Festival and please our audience with some amazing films, brought back to the silver screen!

Europe loves European Film Festivals

A good place to meet and to exchange, festivals provide a vibrant and accessible environment for talent, stories and emotions - in short European Film.

The Creative Europe - MEDIA Sub-programme of the European Union aims to foster the European audiovisual industry's competitiveness, to promote its rich variety and to encourage the transnational circulation of films. The programme acknowledges the cultural, social and economic role of festivals in increasing audiences' interest in European films, by co-financing around 60 of them across Europe every year.

These festivals stand out with their rich and diverse European programming, their activities in support of young professionals, their commitment to audience development and film literacy, and the importance they give to networking and meeting opportunities for professionals and the public alike. In 2019, the Creative Europe - MEDIA Sub-programme supported 75 festivals across 28 countries participating to the MEDIA Sub-programme and reached nearly 4 million cinema-lovers.

Creative Europe – MEDIA Sub-programme is pleased to support the 38. edition of the International Young Audience Film Festival Ale Kino!. We hope you enjoy a rich and stimulating event.
